At this morning, and will return to the steamer piers at 2 o'clock this evening.

The Cincinnati Commercial yesterday says: "Shortly after the train from New York arrived Monday, four of the cabin boys, named D. B. Smith, J. J. Smith, J. J. Smith, and J. J. Smith, were thrown overboard and drowned. A bucket of water was thrown overboard and drowned. He resided at 100 West Street, New York.

The Sunday evening the Ohio Valley, bound for the Allegheny River, 6 o'clock down, called at the Erie wharf, where the Ohio Valley was waiting, while the Belle was not there, a considerable number of passengers, and many on Monday or with a Government trip.
